TWO WELL KNOWN ORLAND RESIDENTS ANSWER FINAL CALL

On Friday, Feb. 1, Christoph Steinhagen of Orland answered the Master's call at Burnside hospital at eleven o'clock. Mr. Steinhagen had been ailing for the past few years, being troubled with cancer of the stomach. On Thursday he suffered a severe attack of cramps and although he was rushed to Burnside hospital he was beyond all human aid. He passed away peacefully at 11:05 o'clock Friday morning.

Mr. Steinhagen was born in Hageboesch, New Buchow, Mecklenburg, Schwerin, Germany, on April 20, 1854. Here he was raised by his devout parents and received a parochial school education, being confirmed at the age of 14 years in the Lutheran faith. At the age of 19 he came to America, working on farm around Mokena. At the age of 27 on Jan. 5, 1881 he was united in wedlock with Maria Pacher of Orland. Due to his thrifty habits he soon possessed a farm and here were born the seven children who blessed this marriage.

Of the four sons, Willie preceded the father in death in 1894. His other sons are: George, who married Otilia Koehler, Christ who married Mathilda Sippel and Walter. The three daughters are: Mrs. Roland Trull, Mrs. Charles Sippel, Mrs. Fred Enders. Mr. Steinhagen was a quiet, uncomplaining man. Although he suffered much pain with the dreaded disease of cancer, yet he did not murmur.

For the past 7 years he had been a resident of Orland.

A large concourse of people attended the funeral services held at Christ Lutheran church, Rev. W. C. Greve, officiating. He spoke words of enduring comfort to the deeply bereaved family.

The deceased was buried in the Evangelical cemetery at Mokena. A large concourse also paid their final respects at the grave.

Mr. Steinhagen leaves to mourn his loss, his widow, Maria nee Pacher, three sons, George, Christ and Walter, three daughters, Mrs. Roland Trull, Mrs. Charles Sippel and Mrs. Fred Enders, 7 grand children and a host of other relatives and friends.

In 1910 he joined the Lutheran church at Orland which he attended faithfully and helped. In 1913 he was elected trustee for one year. Many times he represented the synodical conventions held in Chicago.

Mrs. Emily and Elenor Waje sang a number of beautiful songs at the home and at the church.

On Saturday morning the sad news of the death of Mrs. Christian Keuch was flashed over the wire from Blue Island announcing to her many friends that her long and severe battle against cancer had ended. At 6:30 a. m. Saturday she passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Freundle firm in her faith in her Redeemer.

Mrs. Wilhelmina Keuch, nee Rauch was born in Orland township on Feb. 12, 1876. She was baptized in the Lutheran faith by the sainted Rev. Martin of Bachelors Grove. On May 19, 1895 she was united in marriage with Christian Keuch, Rev. Krebs performing the ceremony. They settled on a farm southeast of Orland. The union was blessed with 8 children, 4 boys and 4 girls.

The deceased was stricken last October. On Nov. 14 she was taken to the St. Francis hospital Blue Island, where she underwent an operation for the removal of a cancer. She remained there for 5 weeks following which she was taken to the home of her daughter in Blue Island. She appeared to be improving, but on Jan. 11 she suffered a hemorrhage and began to fail rapidly after that. She attained the age of 47 years, 11 months and 28 days.

She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, eight children, Harry, Fred, Paul and Christian, Mrs. Jno Freundle, Mrs. Emil Bettenhausen, Romilda, Malinda, three grand children, two brothers, Wm. Rauch of Orland and Louis of Blue Island, two sisters, Mrs. K. Schultz of Blue Island and Mrs. Henry Aulwurm of the same city, besides rapidly.

TEN COMMANDMENTS A GRIPPING, AWE INSPIRING PLAY

The Ten Commandments now showing at the Woods theatre in Chicago is one of the most gripping and educational and inspiring plays ever filmed. The editor and his wife witnessed this magnificent production on Tuesday as the guests of the Woods theatre and to say we enjoyed it, is putting it mild. There are so many intensely gripping episodes that one does not weary even though it takes 3 hours to run the entire film. The scenes showing the handing down of the Ten Commandments is awe inspiring. The play also vividly portrays how the Ten Commandments were broken by the Israelites and how they are being violated in our modern day and age. This wonderful play goes further in reaching the hearts of the people than many sermons would for it will be presented to many people who never see the inside of a church.

The big idea back of the play is that the Ten Commandments are not merely a set of laws but are the LAW and that the eternal truths do prevail. Everyone who sees this great play will be more than entertained—for they will be inspired to higher and nobler thoughts and aspirations.

many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held on Tuesday last from the Christ Lutheran church of Orland, Rev. W. C. Greve officiating. The church was far too small to hold the great crowd of relatives and friends who came to pay their final tribute of honor. The Ladies Aid of this church of which the deceased was a member since 1898 attended the services in a body and sang. Mrs. W. C. Greve of Orland and Mrs. Wm. Greve of Tinley Park both sang a number of beautiful songs.

The departed was highly esteemed and a beloved church member and a faithful wife and mother.

The bunco party given by the Ladies Aid of Christ Lutheran church was attended by 125 people, 25 tables played. Beautiful prizes were awarded. The first prize, a beautiful quilt was won by the Strand boy; the second prize consisting of pillow cases was won by Edward Witt; third prize consisting of a table cloth was won by Mrs. Wm. Greve of Tinley Park; the 4th prize, won by Mrs. George Brier, the 5th and 6th prizes were a doily and a box of handkerchiefs. Marie Brier won the booby prize, two bars of soap and handcloths. A delightful lunch was served by the ladies. Everyone is looking forward to the next bunco party.

The village board had a very interesting meeting last Monday eve. Three of the trustees being absent it was unanimously voted to adjourn.

Quite a number of Orland auto owners have not paid their village vehicle tax. Why?

The snow around Orland is packed fine and every evening the young and old are out coasting. Some even venture skiing, but it seems noses don't slide good on the snow. Several minor accidents are reported.

Adolph Zorbs has taken over the agency for the Star car and is demonstrating same.

FRANKFORT MULE CASE MAY GO BEFORE GOV SMALL FOR REVIEW

The famous Frankfort mule case will not stay down and from present indications it may go before Governor Small. Mr. Doty who was sued by Mr. Sherman a road contractor because he shot a mule belonging to the contractor and which the aged humane officer says could not have recovered from a serious injury it had sustained, has taken the matter up with Senator R. J. Barr since he lost out in the recent suit tried in the circuit court at Joliet and Senator Barr it is understood has intimated that he will lay the case before Governor Len Small. Mr. Doty had been thinking of appealing the case, but he claims he was unable to get a transcript of the proceedings of the trial in time to file for an appeal.

As a result of the last trial after 5 well known Frankfort men had testified as to the condition of the mule and saying he was worthless, and after Leo McLaren, well known veterinarian of Joliet had also testified that the animal was worthless and would not have recovered from its injury, the jury returned a verdict in favor of Mr. Sherman on the ground that the laws of Illinois do not give humane or police officers authority to shoot animals in order to put them out of their misery without the consent of the owner.

Mr. Doty testified that the mule was worthless and could not have recovered from its injury. Mr. Doty paid the court costs and the value of the mule which had been set at $100 was later cut down to $60 which was paid by Mr. Doty. He has laid the case before F. A. Laird, chief veterinarian at Springfield who has written Mr. Doty as follows:

State of Illinois,
Department of Agriculture,
Springfield

January 28, 1924.
Mr. Levi Doty,
Frankfort, Illinois.
Dear Mr. Doty:

I am in receipt of yours of recent date, regarding the mule in question, that has caused so much trouble heretofore.

I certainly appreciate men of your caliber, who are not afraid to stand up for their rights, but I am very very sorry that I have an Ass't State Veterinarian in the State of Illinois, that would question a case of this kind, as I never in my life had an open hock joint which healed that the animal ever amounted to anything.

I have very carefully gone over this case, and I feel that you were perfectly justified in destroying the mule.

Yours respectfully,
Department of Animal Industry,
F. A. Laird,
Chief Veterinarian.

FRANKFORT TO VOTE ON SCHOOL BOND ISSUE NEXT WEDNESDAY

The taxpayers of Frankfort will be given an opportunity to say if Frankfort is to have a new school on Wednesday, Feb. 20th when a special election will be held in Dist. 157 to vote for or against the $45,000 bond issue for the purpose of building a new school. The bonds would run from 1924 to 1948 and would draw interest at the rate of 5 per cent. If the issue carries the only tax rate increased would be the school tax which would be 73 cents per each $100 assessed valuation.

The rest of the herd averaged about $143 a head. In all the sale came to about $4500.

In the Days of Poor Richard

—By Irving Bacheller

WHEN Benjamin Franklin said to King George the Third: "If anyone supposes that I could prevail upon my countrymen to take black for white or wrong for right, he does not know them nor me," is the period Mr. Bacheller has chosen for his new romance—the fight of our fathers for liberty. Dramatically involved with the historical incidents and figures is the beautiful love story of a boy and a girl.

Here is the human story of our struggle for independence and the part Benjamin Franklin played in it.

The BROWN MOUSE by Herbert Quick

As the latest-coming visitors moved forward, they heard the schoolmaster finishing his passage at arms with the salesman.

"You should not feel exasperated at us, Mr. Carmichael," said he in tones of the most complete respect, "for what our figures show. You are unfortunate in the business proposition you offer this community. That is all. Even these children have the facts to prove that the creamery outfit you offer is not worth within two thousand dollars of what you ask for it, and that it is very doubtful if it is the sort of outfit we should need."

"I'll bet you a thousand dollars—" began Carmichael hotly, when Jim waved him down.

"Not with me," said Jim. "Your friend, Mr. Bonner, there, knows what chance there is for you to bet even a thousand cents with me. Besides, we know our facts, in this school. We've been working on them for a long time."

"Bet your life we have!" interposed Newton Bronson.

"Before we finish," said Jim, "I want to thank you gentlemen for bringing in Mr. Carmichael. We have been reading up on the literature of the creamery promoter, and it is a very fine thing to have one in the flesh with whom to—demonstrate, if Mr. Carmichael will allow me to say so."

Carmichael looked at Bonner, made an expressive motion with his head toward the door, and turned as if to leave.

"Well," said he, "I can do plenty of business with real men. If you want to make the deal I offer you, and I can show you from the statistics I've got at the hotel that it's a special deal just to get started in this part of the state, and carries a thousand dollars of cut in price to you—let's leave these children and this schoolmaster and get something done."

"I can't allow you to depart," said Jim more gently than before, "without thanking you for the very excellent talk you gave us on the advantage of the co-operative creamery over the centralizer. We in this school believe in the co-operative creamery, and if we can get rid of you, Mr. Carmichael, without buying your equipment, I think your work here may be productive of good."

"He's off three or four points on the average overrun in the Wisconsin co-ops," said Newton.

"And we thought," said Mary Smith, "that we'd need more cows than he said to keep up a creamery of our own."

"Oh," replied Jim, "but we mustn't expect Mr. Carmichael to know the subject as well as we do, children. He makes a practice of talking mostly to people who know nothing about it—and he talks very well. All in favor of thanking Mr. Carmichael please say 'Aye.'"

CHAPTER XXI

A New Era Dawns.

There was a rousing chorus of "Aye!" in which Mr. Carmichael, followed closely by Mr. Bonner, made his exit. B. B. Hamm went forward and shook Jim's hand slowly and contemplatively, as if trying to remember just what he should say.

"James E. Irwin," said he, "you've saved us from being skinned by the smoothest grafter that I ever seen."

"Not I," said Jim; "the kind of school I stand for, Mr. Hamm, will save you more than that—and give you the broadest culture any school ever gave. A culture based on life. We've been studying life, in this school—the life we all live here in this district."

"He had a smooth partner, too," said Columbus Brown. Jim looked at Bonner's little boy in one of the front seats and shook his head at Columbus warningly.

"If I hadn't herded 'em in here to ask you a few questions about co-operative creameries," said Mr. Talcott, "we'd have been stuck—they pretty near had our names. And then the whole neighborhood would have been sucked in for about fifty dollars a name."

"I'd have gone in for two hundred," said B. B. Hamm.

"May I call a little meeting here for a minute, Jim?" asked Ezra Bronson.

"Why, where's he gone?"

"They're some other visitors come in," said a little girl, pulling her apron in embarrassment at the teacher's absence.

Jim had, after what seemed to Jennie an interminable while, seen the county superintendent and her distinguished party, and was now engaged in welcoming them and endeavoring to find them seats—quite an impossible thing at that particular moment, by the way.

"Don't mind us, Mr. Irwin," said

Doctor Brathwayt. "This is the best thing we've seen on our journeyings. Please go on with the proceedin's. That gentleman seems to have in mind the perfectin' of some sort of organization. I'm intensely interested."

"I'd like to call a little meetin' here," said Ezra to the teacher. "See in' we've busted up your program so far, may we take a little while longer?"

"Certainly," said Jim. "The school will please come to order."

The pupils took their seats, straightened their books and papers, and were at attention. Doctor Brathwayt nodded approvingly as if at the answer to some question in his mind. "Children," said Mr. Irwin, "you may or may not be interested in what these gentlemen are about to do—but I hope you are. Those who wish may be members of Mr. Bronson's meeting. Those who do not prefer to do so may take up their regular work."

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Bronson to the remains of Mr. Carmichael's creamery party, "we've been cutting bait in this neighborhood about long enough. I'm in favor of fishing, now. How many here favor building a co-operative creamery if we can get the farmers in with cows enough to make it profitable, and the equipment at the right price?"

Each man held up a hand.

"Here's one of our best farmers not voting," said Mr. Bronson, indicating Raymond Simms. "How about you, Raymond?"

"Ah reckon paw'll come in," said Raymond blushing.

"He will if you say so," said Mr. Bronson.

Raymond's hand went up amid a ripple of applause from the pupils, who seemed glad to have a voter in their ranks.

"Unanimous!" said Mr. Bronson. "It is a vote! Now I'd like to hear a motion to perfect a permanent organization to build a creamery. Mr. Irwin will you please act as secretary."

"I'll Bet You a Thousand Dollars," Cried Carmichael Hotly.

Jim sat down at the desk and began making notes. The meeting appointed committees, fixed upon a time for a future meeting, threw a collection of half-dollars on the desk to start a petty cash fund, made the usual joke about putting the secretary under bond, adjourned and dispersed.

"It's a go this time!" said Newton to Jim.

"I think so," said Jim, "with those men interested. Well, our study of creameries has given a great deal of language work, a good deal of arithmetic, some geography, and finally saved the people from a swindle. Rather good work, Raymond!"

"My mother has a delayed luncheon ready for the party," said Jennie to Jim. "Please come with us—please!"

But Jim demurred. Getting off at this time of day was really out of the question if he was to be ready to show the real work of the school in the afternoon session.

"This has been rather extraordinary," said Jim, "but I am very glad you were here. It shows the utility of the right sort of work in letter-writing, language, geography and arithmetic—in learning things about farming."

"It certainly does," said Doctor Brathwayt. "I wouldn't have missed it under any consideration; but I'm certainly sorry for that creamery shark and his accomplice—to be routed by the Fifth Reader grade in farming!"

The luncheon was rather a wonderful affair—and its success was unqualified after everybody discovered that the majority of those in attendance felt much more at home when calling it dinner.

"What d'ye think of our schools?" asked the colonel.

"Well," said Professor Gray, "it's not fair to judge, Colonel, on what must have been rather an extraordinary moment in the school's history. I take it that you don't put on a representation of 'The Knave Unmasked' every morning."

"It was more like a caucus than I've ever seen it, daddy," said Jennie, "and less like a school."

"Don't you think," said Doctor Brathwayt, "that it was less like a school because it was more like life? It was life. If I am not mistaken, history of this community was making in that schoolroom as we entered."

"You're perfectly right, Doctor," said the colonel. "Jim's got too big for the district, and so we're going to enlarge the district, and the schoolhouse, and the teaching force, and the means of educational grace generally. That's as sure as can be—after what took place this morning."

"He's rather a wonderful person, to be found in such a position," said Professor Gray, "or would be in any region I have visited."

"He's a native product," said the colonel, "but a wonder all the same. He's a Brown Mouse, you know."

"A—a—?" Doctor Brathwayt was plainly astonished. And so the colonel was allowed to tell again the story of the Darbshire brown mice, and why he called Jim Irwin one. Doctor Brathwayt said it was an interesting Mendellian explanation of the appearance of such a character as Jim. "And if you are right, Colonel, you'll lose him one of these days. You can't expect to retain a Caesar, a Napoleon, or a Lincoln in a rural school, can you?"

"I don't know about that," said the colonel. "The great opportunity for such a Brown Mouse may be in this very school, right now. He'd have as big an army right here as Socrates ever had. The Brown Mouse is the only judge of his own proper place."

"I think," said Mrs. Brathwayt, as they motored back to the school, "that your country schoolmaster is rather terrible. The way he crushed that Mr. Carmichael was positively merciless. Did he know how cruel he was?"

"I think not," said Jennie. "It was the truth that crushed Mr. Carmichael."

"But that vote of thanks," said Mrs. Brathwayt. "Surely that was the bitterest irony."

"I wonder if it was," said Jennie. "No, I am sure it wasn't. He wanted to leave the children thinking as well as possible of their victim, and especially of Mr. Bonner; and there was really something in Mr. Carmichael's talk which could be praised. I have known Jim Irwin since we were both children, and I feel sure that if he had had any idea that his treatment of this man had been unnecessarily cruel, it would have given him a lot of pain."

"My dear," said Mrs. Brathwayt, "I think you are to be congratulated for having known for a long time a genius."

"Thank you," said Jennie. And Mrs. Brathwayt gave her a glance which brought to her cheek another blush.

but of a different sort from the one provoked by the uproar in the Woodruff school.

There could be no doubt now that Jim was thoroughly wonderful—not that she, the county superintendent, was quite as thoroughly a little fool. She was to be put in authority over him! It was too absurd for laughter. Fortunately, she hadn't hindered him much—but who was to be thanked for that? Was it owing to any wisdom of hers? Well, she had decided in his favor, in those first proceedings to revoke his certificate. Perhaps that was as good a thing to remember as was to be found in the record.

CHAPTER XXII

And So They Lived—

And so it turned out quite as if it were in the old ballad, that "all in the merry month of May," and also "all in the merry green wood," there were great doings about the bold little promontory where once stood the cabin on the old wood-lot where the Simms family had dwelt.

The brook ran about the promontory, and laid at its feet on three sides a carpet of blue-grass, amid clumps of trees and wild bushes. Not far afield on either hand came the black corn-land, but up and down the bluff sides of the brook for some distance on both sides of the King-dragged highway, ran the old wood-lot, now regaining much of the unkempt appearance which characterized it when Jim Irwin had drawn upon himself the gentle rebuke of Old Man Simms for not giving a whoop from the big road before coming into the yard.

The cabin was gone, and in its place stood a pretty little bungalow, about which blossomed lilacs and peonies and roses and other old-fashioned flowers furnished by Mrs. Irwin. For this was the teacher's house or schoolmanse for the new consolidated Woodruff district, and the old Simms wood-lot was henceforth to be the glee-land of the schoolmanse.

English Guineas.

Guineas were minted first in 1663 out of gold brought from the Guinea coast. These bore the representation of an elephant on one side and were called guineas. Coins were issued to the value of one guinea, two guineas, five guineas, and half a guinea. At first the guinea was worth only twenty shillings, but as the silver coinage gradually deteriorated, in 1695 the guinea was worth thirty shillings. In 1698 its value fell to twenty-one and sixpence, and to twenty-one shillings in 1717, remaining at this figure until it disappeared from the coinage. The last guinea was coined in 1817, when the sovereign first made its appearance. It is still customary in Great Britain to estimate professional fees, prices of pictures, complimentary subscriptions, and so on, in guineas.

Interesting Story About "Devil Bridge" in Wales

There are many "devil bridges" in Europe, and nearly all have legends to account for the name. One of the more picturesque of these satanic bridges is in Wales, at Aberystwyth.

The story, as told by an English writer, is that Megan Llandunach was one day at her wits' end to know how to bring her only cow across the chasm. The devil then appeared to her and offered to bridge the gorge if, in return, he might have the first living thing that crossed it. Megan agreed, and the devil, thinking the woman would be the first to pass, flung down his bridge. But Megan was no fool. Taking a crust from her pocket, she threw it to the other side of the gorge and sent her dog after it. The outwitted devil, so the story goes, took his defeat very sensibly and left his bridge there for future generations of the clever Welsh.—Detroit News.

One of the seven wonders of the ancient world was the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, built in the Fourth century before Christ, and burned by the was doomed to early destruction at the hands of a half-crazed Greek named Herostratus. In 356 B. C., on the night when Alexander the Great was born, he burned the temple to the ground. When he was arraigned for his crime he said he had done it to make an immortal name for himself, and he had chosen the night Alexander was born because Diana was the goddess of childbirth, and he believed that she would be in Macedonia to bless the little prince's arrival.

A new temple, started in 350, became a storehouse for great gifts. In 262 A. D. invading Goths destroyed the city and burned the temple. Only a few of the columns escaped, and they were used in the mosque of St. Sophia at Constantinople.—Detroit News.

An Amazing Fact

TO many people it may seem incredible that a habit so common as coffee-drinking can be harmful. Yet if your doctor were to enumerate the common causes of indigestion, headache, and run-down condition, he would be likely to mention coffee.

If you are troubled with insomnia, nervousness, or are inclined to be high-strung, try Postum in place of coffee for thirty days, and note the difference in the way you feel, and how much better you sleep.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage, absolutely free from caffeine, or any harmful drug.

Contradicting Jesus Christ

By REV. H. OSTROM, D. D.
Extension Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—For consider him who endured such contradiction of sinners against himself.—Heb. 12:3.

Then, the man in his sins is not first of all rejecting the preacher. He is not primarily rejecting the organized church whose faults he recounts. He is rejecting Christ—"Himself." The word "contradiction" has at its root a meaning that carries actual antagonism with it. It means answering again, denying, disputing, striving against. And to intensify the force of its meaning the Scriptures add the word "such." Such contradiction of sinners against His teaching? His appeal? His invitation?—Himself.

There you have Christ and the unsaved man in startling contradiction. Christ has said something. Sinners have contradicted it. Christ has given the answer to a crying need. Sinners have answered again. Christ has announced truth. Sinners have denied it. Christ has made a claim. Sinners have disputed it. Christ has called to peace. Sinners have determined upon strife. All this He has "endured."

With this Scripture before us, who could claim that there is agreement or nearly agreement between the natural man and Christ? Who could say that the declaration is merely concerning neglect or omission? No, the sinner is answering in protest. The call is genuine and the sinner is rejecting it. Is he rejecting the call? Then he is rejecting the Christ, "Himself" who gave it.

To deny that the sin-cure He has provided is effective and that the call to accept Him is genuine, and then to contend for the greatness of the character of Jesus and the power of His teaching and example is to deny the truth concerning the invitation to the sinner and at the same time to manufacture in one's own mind an imaginary person and then call that imaginary product by the endearing name Jesus. What if in that imaginary character thus produced there may be some elements of truth, when all the while they are mingled with other elements of downright falsehood? Certainly its chief characteristic is that it is a manufactured product of human imagination.

God "gave His only begotten Son," but this procedure rejects the gift and proceeds forthwith to make a substitute for it. That character is man-made. It is a human idol. You cannot rate Jesus as a child of questionable parentage, or as a person later noted as a superior sage, or still later as a martyr, or yet later as a recoverer from suspended animation, unless you are willing to contend for your ability to manufacture this imaginary character in your own imagination and substitute it for the revealed Jesus. To substitute it for Him who was born of the virgin, who is the Truth; who gave Himself to the death for us that He might redeem us from all iniquity; and who actually, literally rose again from the dead for our justification. It is Revelation versus Imagination. Men must accept the Christ revealed or else place themselves in the position where they can be successfully accused of being vain enough to prefer the character they invent in their own minds—that, or else outright infidels.

Out of pictures gathered from cathedrals, or out of pictures drawn from ambitious poets, or out of pictures drawn from an overwrought dream of ease and indulgence one may combine in his imagination a character which to its contriver appears supernatural, but it is only an idol. No clay or metal is in it; it is constructed of "gray matter." But, to its contriver at least, it is real.

A man may, with a measure of contentment, contend that he does not contradict the imaginary character he has so invented, he may even claim that he adores it; but cleared and distinguished from all such stands this ONE—actual, personal, historic, living, calling. And he condemns the thought of a competitor. In this regard the slogan of the faith is "one Lord." By what reasoning, for instance, could one speak of the Christ of today as separated from the Christ of Calvary? And this is the Christ we mean when we speak of contradicting Him. The vision must be penetrating enough to see the challenging Lover of Souls standing ever in the path with holy insistence demanding of men on earth an answer to His call. Now, the cry of the demons when He was here in the flesh, "What have we to do with Thee?" was born of the same spirit of rejection as the cry of the human mob, "Away with Him, crucify Him!" Both answer again, both deny, both dispute His claim, both strive against Him, though on the surface the one savors of indifference and the other of combat. Real Christianity could not thrive on the atonement considered as expediency, or on Jesus Christ as a competitor for fame among men. It must see the actual authority—wielding Christ, and the actual authority—denying sinner.

40 years of experience has demanded that we make them in this wide variety.

No one can write comfortably with a barrel that is too large or too small to be a perfect fit for the hand.

40 years of experience has enabled us to produce the variety of sizes necessary to fit any hand comfortably.

FOOLING REDDY FOX

MR. COON had many scores to settle with Reddy Fox, but as he was not as clever or sly as Reddy it was seldom he had a chance to play any tricks without getting the worst of it.

But one day as he was looking down from a tree where he was flattened along one of its branches he saw an old log and when he saw Mr. Rabbit run into one end and come out of the other he knew very well it was hollow without anyone telling him.

Then Mr. Coon began to think, and the more he thought the broader was his smile, until at last he laughed right out loud. "If I could get him in there I would give him one good beating," he said, and then Mr. Coon came down from the tree and went to the log.

"Yes, I do believe it can be done," he said, and off he ran for home, and when he returned he brought some hen feathers that came from the tail of one of Mr. Man's fat hens.

Mr. Coon tied a piece of twine to these feathers and laid them on the ground at one end of the hollow log, and with the other end in one paw he ran through the log and along the leaf-covered ground to a tree not far away, still carrying the twine in his paw.

Up the tree he climbed and fastened the twine to a branch; then down he came and went to the log again and, tucking the hen feathers in the opening so they could just be seen, he stood off a little distance and looked. "Yes, sir," he said, "I do believe I can fool him."

Mr. Coon waited to see that the twine running from the log to the tree was hidden under bushes that grew close to the ground, that would keep it from being seen and yet did not hold it fast, so that he could pull it by the end he had fastened in the tree.

Reddy Fox could not resist chicken, and thinking he was going to have a fine dinner started to crawl into the hollow log, when he became fastened.

After a while down from the tree came Mr. Coon. Picking up a good strong stick, he ran to the end of the log where Reddy's legs were kicking and gave him two or three good hard cuts.

Mr. Reddy Fox howled and wriggled, but he could not get out, and, giving him one more thump for good measure, Mr. Coon dropped the stick and ran off into the woods.

In a few minutes he came down the path from the other direction, making all the noise possible as he shuffled along. When he came to the log where Reddy was a prisoner he stopped.

"Who's there?" asked Reddy in a muffled tone. "Help! help! I can't get out."

"Well, if that isn't Reddy Fox," said Mr. Coon in a tone of great surprise. "What in the world are you doing there?" he asked. "Surely you did not let your head run away with your good sense, Mr. Fox? You are in a terrible plight, I must admit. Why, you might have died in there if I had not happened along."

"Mr. Coon, won't you please pull me out? I am smothering in here," said Reddy Fox, wondering if Mr. Coon was going to talk the rest of the day instead of helping him to get free.

"Why, of course, of course," said Mr. Coon, taking Reddy by the hind feet and pulling with all his might.

Reddy wriggled and Mr. Coon pulled, and after a while out he came, looking very much the worse for the struggle.

As they sat on the ground getting their breath Reddy asked, as he rubbed his back, "Did you see any one running through the woods as you came along, Mr. Coon?"

Mr. Coon shook his head and looked very innocent. "No. Did you see anyone?"

"No, but I felt—I mean, I thought I heard some one just before you came along. By the way, Mr. Coon, I want to explain that I went in that log to get that hen for you. I always like to do a friend a good turn."

"That was very kind of you, I am sure," said Mr. Coon, "and I am glad I happened along to help you, for one good turn deserves another, Mr. Fox, that's my motto."

"I am sorry she got away," said Mr. Fox. "I certainly would enjoy getting her. I wonder you did not see her as you came along."

"She must have gone the other way," said Mr. Coon as he tucked the feathers and twine deeper into his coat pocket.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

IVY

IN NEW ENGLAND there is a popular superstition that it is unlucky to keep ivy in the house and that ivy is unlucky as a gift. At first it seems strange to see the idea of bad luck associated with ivy, which plant decorated the thyrsus of Bacchus and the leaves of which the Romans mingled with the laurel in their victors' crowns.

All popular superstitions have an origin, which origin must be searched for in remote past almost without exception. They are inheritances. Those which are of ancient origin appear to be of great antiquity.

At first glance, the modern will, upon investigation, generally be found to be most ancient in their roots. Thus the idea that the eating of tomatoes produces cancer, a few years ago a most common superstition and one which would appear to date only from the comparatively recent time when tomatoes were first used as food, is, in reality, merely an application of one of man's earliest conceptions, that of the primitive magic which is known as homeopathic—like producing like.

So there is some ancient cause for the ivy superstition. It would appear to be a lingering echo of a historical incident which rendered at the time the generally esteemed and venerated ivy a most unsafe and unlucky plant to have in one's possession. About two hundred years before the Christian era the cult of Bacchus obtained a great vogue in the Roman world and degenerated into orgiastic rites of a most depraved and degenerate nature, not infrequently accompanied with the murder of secret votaries whose fidelity was suspected. All Rome and Italy were honeycombed with the debasing cult. An aroused government took action; many were put to death and many imprisoned until the scandal was stamped out. The ivy-wound rod, or thyrsus, was carried by the votaries of Bacchus when celebrating the orgies. To have one of these in your house at the time the government was suppressing the Bacchic scandal, or to receive one as a gift, was decidedly unlucky.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel

DOLORES

LIKE Juanita, the Spanish Dolores has gained extraordinary vogue in this country. Indeed, it is now regarded as typically American, especially in the Southwest where the influence of the early Spanish settlers has been engrained for all time. Its unfortunate translation, "sorrow," has never checked its vogue; rather, the opposite emotion has seemed to invest its bearers. Most of the Dolores who have come to the writer's notice have been gay coquettes with laughing eyes and lips.

The name is one of Spanish Catholic growth, and was originally applied to express the mournful circumstances of some "child of misery, baptized in tears." The fashion for bestowing the name of the Holy Virgin upon several members of a Catholic family with a distinguishing phrase led to the frequent usage of Dolores. Parents, mindful of the Seven Sorrows supposed to have pierced the heart of the Holy Mother, would choose for one child the musical name of Maria de Dolores. It is quite appropriate that Dolores' talismanic stone should be jet, the emblem of sorrow. But fortunately for her, to wear the stone insures the opposite emotion; it will protect her from sorrow, from danger and disease. Tuesday is her lucky day and 4 her lucky number.

COOLIDGE BACKS CABINET MEMBER

President Refuses to Dismiss Denby at Request of Senate.

Washington.—President Coolidge on Monday night flatly refused to dismiss Secretary of the Navy Denby at the behest of the senate.

By a vote of 47 to 34, the senate late in the afternoon declared its sense of that body that the President immediately should call for the resignation of Mr. Denby because of the leases of navy oil reserves that the navy secretary and Albert B. Fall, the secretary of the interior, had made to E. L. Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair.

A few hours later President Coolidge issued a formal statement announcing that he would ignore the senate resolution, which he pronounced an invasion of executive functions.

President Coolidge issued the following statement denying that the senate has the right to force the resignation of an executive officer:

"No official resignation can be given to the passage of the senate resolution relative to their opinion concerning members of the cabinet or other officers under executive control.

"As soon as special counsel can advise me as to the legality of these leases and assemble for me the pertinent facts in the various transactions, I shall take such action as seems essential for the full protection of the public interests. I shall not hesitate to call for the resignation of any official whose conduct in this matter in any way warrants such action upon my part.

"The dismissal of an officer of the government, such as is involved in this case, other than by impeachment, is exclusively an executive function. I regard this as a vital principle of our government.

"In discussing this principle, Mr. Madison has well said: 'It is laid down in most of the constitutions or bills of rights in the republics of America'; it is to be found in the political writings of the celebrated civilians, and it is everywhere held as essential to the preservation of liberty that the three great departments of government be kept separate and distinct.

"President Cleveland likewise stated the correct principle in discussing requests and demands made by the senate upon him and upon different departments of the government, in which he said:

"They assume the duty of the senate to sit in judgment upon the exercise of my exclusive discretion and executive function, for which I am solely responsible to the people from whom I have so lately received the sacred trust of office.

"My oath to support and defend the Constitution, my duty to the people who have chosen me to execute the powers of their great office, and not to relinquish them, and my duty to the chief magistrate, which I must preserve unimpaired in all its dignity and vigor, compel me to refuse compliance with these demands."

"The President is responsible to the people for his conduct relative to the retention or dismissal of public officials. I assume that responsibility. And the people may be assured that as soon as I can be advised so that I may act with entire justice to all parties concerned and fully protect the public interests I shall act.

"I do not propose to sacrifice any innocent man for my own welfare, nor do I propose to retain in office any unfit man for my own welfare. I shall try to maintain the functions of the government unimpaired, to act upon the evidence and the law as I find it and to deal thoroughly and summarily with every kind of wrongdoing.

"In the meantime such steps have been and are being taken as fully to protect the public interests."

Quell Convict Revolt After Two Guards Die

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Led by murderers, bank robbers, and other desperate characters, several hundred prisoners revolted at the western penitentiary here and made an ineffectual attempt to dynamite their way to liberty.

At night the big prison, located on the bank of the Ohio river three miles from the business district, was quiet, and the dungeons held those unruly men who had killed two prison officers in their bold dash for freedom.

An explosion which wrecked the main gates and a section of the south wall marked the beginning of the riot, in which guards, county detectives, and city police took part. A number of prisoners aided the officers in their fight against the convicts. One of these, William Jasper, a negro, was shot while trying to rescue a guard.

Ford's Train Kills Three

Glendelf, N. H.—A special train on the Boston & Maine railroad bearing Henry Ford from Boston to Detroit on Monday struck four sportsmen who were walking the track. Three of the party, brothers, Charles B. and Robert L. Manning of Manchester, and Francis Manning of Cambridge, Mass., were killed and the fourth, Ralph D. Reed of Manchester, N. H., is seriously injured. The train crew did not know of the accident and continued on their way.

you this interview because in many ways you're just the man I'm looking for. You are reliable; that's essential to me. You have system—"

Here Waverly made again the nervous, scraping noise in his throat.

At that sound the president pushed back his chair. "I'm going to be brutally frank, young man," he continued. "In the day-by-day contact one has with one's secretary, something more than honesty and good bookkeeping is necessary. You are lacking in tact—intuition. You have a personal habit that is very unpleasant to me, and you have not recognized that fact. I know from the report of your physical examination that you are not ill. Therefore your continual clearing of your throat seems to me to argue failure in self-control and lack in a certain sort of intelligence that I place very high. I expect the men in my bank to know how and to care to make the bank a pleasant place. That's very important in the wear and tear of work. From your own point of view, Waverly, I consider it a big factor in your success. I've given you a longer trial than I give most men. Good-morning."

As Waverly pulled to the heavy mahogany door, he caught himself halfway in that familiar raucous scraping in of his breath. Bitterly he realized what a struggle with Habit means: the resolution, the constant effort, the courage to start again after failures.

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

WILLIAM WAVERLY

AS WILLIAM WAVERLY walked toward the private elevator at the back of the great white marble bank building, the guards made way for him respectfully and several clerks murmured good morning ingratiatingly. For was not this young man, as the president's personal secretary, destined to be a power behind the throne? He was the last of a line of equally carefully dressed young men who had been on trial for that position; but whereas the others had disappeared within a fortnight, this secretary had now held his post for three months—exactly three months that very morning.

William Waverly, en route to the twentieth floor, was not so certain of his position. Pay day always made him nervous. He cleared his throat uneasily and loudly so that the elevator man glanced in his direction.

An hour later a message reached him to report immediately in the great financier's inner office. The president motioned Waverly to a seat and took out a cigar. Again Waverly scraped his bronchial tubes, and the president put down his cigar unlighted.

"Waverly," he began, "I'm giving

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 17

JOSHUA AND THE CONQUEST OF CANAAN

LESSON TEXT—Josh. 1:1-9; 23:1-3. GOLDEN TEXT—Not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the Lord your God spake concerning you.—Josh. 23:14.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Lessons From the Life of Joshua.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Joshua and the Conquest of Canaan.

The book of Joshua, from which our lesson is taken, is a history of the conquest of the Promised Land and its apportionment among the tribes of Israel. It takes its name from its principal character, Joshua. During the wilderness journey he was Moses' minister and captain of his army. When Moses was denied the privilege of going over the Jordan, Joshua was appointed to the leadership of Israel. Moses, the representative of the law, brought Israel to the borders of Canaan. Joshua was the man chosen to lead the people into the place of rest. The name, "Joshua," has the same derivation as the name "Jesus".

I. Joshua's Call (Josh. 1:1, 2).

Moses was dead, but God's work must go on. The work was continued by calling Joshua to take it up. Joshua, no doubt, was sorrowful over the loss of his master, but there was now no time for mourning.

II. God Renews His Promise of the Land to Israel (Josh. 1:3, 4).

This promise had been given to Abraham and renewed to Isaac, Jacob and Moses. It is now renewed to Israel when they are about to enter upon its possession. The borders of the land were "from the wilderness and this Lebanon even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun" (v. 4). The nearest it was ever possessed was during the reigns of David and Solomon, though not then fully realized. This land still belongs to the Jews and in God's own time they shall possess it. Their possession of this land was due entirely to themselves. God promised them that wherever their feet set upon the land, it was theirs. If they failed to secure possession, it was because they failed to claim it.

III. God's Promise Promised to Joshua (Josh. 1:5).

Joshua was entering upon a perilous and difficult enterprise, but the Lord said, as He was with Moses so He would be with him. The difficulties before him were:

1. The Jordan River (v. 2). This river was now at its flood (Josh. 3:15), making it impossible for armies to cross.

2. The People Were Living in Walled Cities (Num. 13:38). Notwithstanding this, God is ready to insure success. (1) "I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee" (v. 5). (2) "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee" (v. 5). (3) "As I was with Moses, so will I be with thee." Joshua had been with Moses throughout their forty years' experience, from the Egyptian deliverance to the time of his death. Because he believed that God was with his master, he was willing and ready to cross Jordan at its flood and courageously meet the enemies on the other side.

IV. Conditions of Blessings in the Land (Josh. 1:6-9).

1. "Be Strong and of Good Courage" (v. 6). His mission was to go in and divide the land among the tribes for an inheritance. It required strength and courage to do this.

2. Unwavering Obedience to the Word of God (v. 7). In a land of idolatry it required much courage to be true to God. Prosperity and success are conditioned upon unswerving obedience to God's commands. In all his work he must conform his life to the law of God. To pass from the path outlined therein would bring disaster and ruin. In order to accomplish this, the law of the Lord must be in his mouth continually. He was to meditate therein day and night. Joshua rendered prompt obedience. He did not stop to cavil, but at once gave orders for the march. God made the plan and gave the directions.

V. Joshua's Retrospect (Josh. 3:1-3).

As his life was now drawing to a close, he summoned the people and rulers to give some farewell counsels.

1. Rehearses God's Goodness (v. 1). God had given rest unto Israel from all their enemies.

2. All That Had Happened Was Done by the Lord. God had fought for them. No one had been able to stand against them; therefore He urges upon them fidelity.

With God.

Give God the blossom of your life! Put Him not off with the fallen leaves!—Nicholls.

Be Obliging.

We cannot always oblige, but we can always speak obligingly.—Voltaire.

WASHINGTON'S TOMB

GREAT kings of old have wrapped them round in state, And, clothed in splendor, yielded up their breath, Dreaming a monarch's fame should outlast Death, And gold and jewels stay the hand of Fate.

The treasures of the earth have decked their tombs; With amber, topaz, diamonds and jade Have skillful craftsmen their dark house inlaid, As though their jeweled gleam might light Death's glooms.

Yet have kings slept the centuries away, Their names forgotten and their glories dim; And no man's lips have named the name of him Who walked as walks a god, a little day.

But thou, a Country's honor and its pride, How void of splendor is thy sleeping place! For no man's hand has skill enough to trace The story of thy worth, thy grave beside.

Yet here shall gather through all passing days, So long as men shall reverence thee, Children and children's children, to renew Thy Country's homage in their heart-felt praise.

Sleep thou serenely on the earth's soft bed, Better than radiant gems or dazzling gold, Our love and reverence about thee fold; In nobler state what king would ask to rest?

—Lois Whittlesey.

The SIMPLICITY of the WASHINGTONS

ALTHOUGH the inauguration ceremonies and festivities were well over when Mrs. Washington reached New York, and the house furnished, there remained for her and her husband the difficult task of arranging the social functions of the executive mansion. While those about them were discussing the question of the title to be used in addressing the new president, whether it should be His Highness, His Serene Highness, His High-mightiness, or simply His Excellency, and whether the reception of the president and his wife should be surrounded by the ceremony of a court or be characterized by the simplicity suited to a republic, the Washingtons quietly and unostentatiously mapped out their social duties according to their own ideas of propriety.

Washington, to whom nothing connected with his office seemed small or unimportant, and who realized that this was naturally a period for the establishment of precedents, gave much time and thought to the proper adjustment of social as well as of political etiquette; in all of which arrangements he was assisted by his former aide-de-camp, Colonel Humphreys, who had recently been secretary of legation in Paris. Mrs. Washington warmly seconded her husband's efforts to combine republican simplicity with the form and ceremony befitting the chief executive. Thus, although the president simply bowed to each guest as he was introduced to him at his Tuesday afternoon levees, making it very evident that the more familiar handshake was to be omitted, at his wife's Friday evening receptions he chose to be considered simply as "a private gentleman."

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By Mary Graham Bonner

THE FRUIT PARADE

"Greetings," cried Mistress Springtime, and as she spoke the air seemed to be just a little warmer, a little softer, a little fresher.

For when Mistress Springtime spoke it seemed to change the whole air about. "Greetings," cried the buds and the early blossoms and the little tiny bits of green things which would before long be leaves.

"Greetings," chirped the birds. "Greetings," called Mr. Sun from on high.

And Mr. Sun shone down upon Mistress Springtime and made everyone around say:

"What a delicious day! So sunny and warm and beautiful. Spring is really here."

And of course Spring really was. For Mistress Springtime had arrived. She had arrived in all her glory. She was not wearing her best dress yet—she had a number of lovely dresses to wear, but she had worn her very pale, olive green traveling suit and a pale-green bonnet to match with a wreath about it of tiny spring flowers hidden under their leaves.

Mostly they were little violets and trailing arbutus flowers.

"I am going to talk to the fruit trees today," said Mistress Springtime. "I'm going to tell them about the spring styles in blossoms for fruit trees—the latest and newest spring styles."

"Will they be different this year?" asked the fruit trees, and their branches shivered a little in the breeze. They were always just a trifle nervous that the styles might change, and they did love the old ones best.

That is, they liked to wear fresh, new copies of the old styles.

That was what they liked. "Just the same," said Mistress Springtime. "Just the same but everything will be new."

"The pear trees will have lovely new blossom costumes—following the good old custom of what is most becoming to pear tree beauty."

"And the apple trees will have their new blossoms and the wild cherry trees, the plum trees and the peach trees, too—all will wear their loveliest costumes. They will be their favorite costumes, but everything will be new."

"Years ago, when some one said: 'Will the fashion in fruit blossoms ever change?' I said:

"No, for we know what each fruit tree likes and what blossoms will be the most becoming."

"Then, too, I said that we wanted to have friends and because we did not have faces which they could tell apart, they would at least be able to know all of the Apple Blossom family, and all of the Pear Blossom family, and all of the Peach Blossom family, and all of the Wild Cherry Blossom family, and all of the Cultivated Cherry Blossom family, and all of the Plum Blossom family."

"So it is they know you, or if they do not know you some friend can introduce you."

"Some one, perhaps, will say: 'What are those blossoms?'"

"And another will answer: 'Oh, don't you know? Those are Apple Blossoms.' 'So they are introduced.'"

"That is the way," the fruit trees said. "Ah! Mistress Springtime, we can hardly wait until you unpack."

Mistress Springtime laughed.

"I wonder if people know," she said, "that we call the ripening of the different fruits the Great Fruit Parade. Just as there is a procession of flowers right through the spring and summer so is there the Great Fruit Parade of blossoms, and later of fruit."

The fruit trees around bent a little in the breeze, as though to answer "Yes" to what Mistress Springtime had said.

And then Mistress Springtime unpacked!

Wanted to Practice.

"No, Elmer," said the father as they sat at dinner, "you can't have a second piece of pie. One is enough for you."

"There 'tis again," rejoined the little chap. "You are always saying I must learn to eat pie with a fork an' then you won't give me a chance to practice."

Long Time to Sleep.

A bright little fellow who had been asleep only five minutes had a dream that covered a period of nearly a week. On being told how short a time he had slept, he exclaimed:

These Three Letters Prove It

Lowell, Mass.—"I am sending you a few lines to let you know what good your medicine has done for me. I want you to let every one know that it has helped me in nervous troubles. I have four children and you know there is a lot to do where children are. They would come in from school and they would start telling me about their little troubles but I could not stand it. I had to send them away. I could not even walk on the street alone I was so nervous. I found one of your books and read it and then I saw in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got it and had taken one bottle when I saw a change in myself. I was surprised. The children can talk all they want to now and it does not bother me. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOSEPH LEMERE, 34 South Street, Lowell, Mass.

Felt Like A New Woman

Springfield, Missouri.—"For four or five months I was run-down, nervous, my back ached and I did not feel like doing a thing. Sometimes my legs ached and felt like they would break and I had a hurting in my sides. I had been reading in the newspapers the letters of other women who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the advertising of it appealed to me so I bought some and saw results in a few days."

To the Last Word

"Isn't it awful how much scandal there is in the papers these days?"

"Yes. It makes me two or three hours late with my housework every day."

most no time. I had hardly been able to do my own work and after taking the Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I recommend it to my friends who have troubles like I did, and hope they will find the same results."—Mrs. M. CARPENTER, 607 W. Chase Street, Springfield, Missouri.

40 Years Old, Feels Like 20

Hagerstown, Md.—"I was very bad off with backache, a bearing-down feeling in my body and a pain in my left side. I could not be on my feet at times and once I was so bad I walked bent over to one side for three weeks. My sister read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me a bottle. I got so much relief that I took more until I was well. I am 40 years old and feel like 20. I am sure this medicine will help all women."—Mrs. MARY E. SANDY, 436 W. Franklin Street, Hagerstown, Md.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

Laxatives do not overcome constipation

"More Important is Internal Cleanliness"

LAXATIVES and cathartics provide temporary relief only, at the expense of permanent injury. In time, says an eminent physician, an almost incalculable amount of harm is done by the use of pills, salts, mineral waters, castor oil and the like.

Some laxatives, according to an intestinal specialist, contain poisons which affect the stomach and intestines, resulting in grave disorders. Certain laxatives are a direct cause of piles.

Physicians Advise Lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Not a Medicine

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

Service Facts Show Continual Growth of Northern Illinois

DEMAND for electric light and power service has increased 2,000 per cent in the last twenty years in this country.

Illinois shows the largest increase of any middle western state.

In 1914 this Company generated and transmitted 120,000 kilowatt hours of electric energy. Last year the output was nearly 350,000,000 kilowatt hours.

This increased demand for electric service is the natural result of new commercial activities in the industrial centers of Northern Illinois and the rapid growth of this territory's residential sections.

The Company is able to take care of this ever increasing demand because its fixed policy is to maintain service facilities adequate at all times for customer requirements.
